 Our Model <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
Alex Rabinovich, the General Partner of the fund had a goal for the firm: to yield returns to individual investors that institutions are accustomed to and to reform the way the financial industry's professionals get compensated. He strives to make a footprint in the industry. Mr. Rabinovich is not only the General Partner, the head trader, and the chief of all the day to day operations of the Limited Partnership, he is the man who is able to swim with the sharks.

Our Model
:: Today :: Our Model
The firm's model for investing complements the average investor's needs. The model works when capital is pooled together and distributed respectively. It limits risk and increases returns. Our experience and success with institutional clients prompted us to look at investors' trading behavior in the financial markets. Institutions are more likely to be profitable on their trades because of the large buying power they have. We took this same concept and applied it to the average investor. When many investors devote funds together, capital accumulates and all are more likely to turn a profit because of the large buying power. At the same time the risk is limited because when the trades are not profitable the losses are shared between every investor in that trade.*

- The markets were booming because of changed economic policies including tax breaks and lowered interest rates.
- Real estate double digit gains created extra equity in households. This extra capital was partly invested in the markets for greater returns and left out of banks while interest rates were low.

Extra capital together with tax breaks gave people more disposable income. As a result, consumption increased and corporate profits look healthy across every industry. At R&A we returned 84.2% during this year
